

Case studies

- How to write case studies on the book?
 - How to gain 7 points fully on case studies in papers?
 - Do you have to memorize all the case studies in the coursebook?
1. For the first question, read the case carefully and try to understand what the topic of the case is. Then, highlight the statistical information such as population and the events that happened on a certain date. Write down the country's capital, population, locations, and other data.
 2. The most important thing about writing a case study in a paper to get a full score is to engage the question with the particular country's information and data. For example, if the question is about population decline, let's say you have chosen Russia in this case. To write the case study, you need to write down the data according to the population decline. You need to explain what caused the population decline in this country and if the question is asking about solutions as well, try to remember the case you have read to write the solutions.
 3. The answer is not really. In paper 1 which is a theory and case studies paper, you are given 6 questions, and you have to choose only 3 questions to answer from each section. These 3 sections contain each theme in the coursebook. So you need to memorize at least 6 or more case studies perfectly. If you are lucky, you might have memorized the chosen case studies on the paper.
- Tip*:

- many students choose the first question on section A because the topic is relevant to the population.
- choose the questions from each section regarding the case studies' topic.

WARNING: if you didn't write your case studies, you will not get a high enough score to pass!!!

HOWEVER, IF YOUR TEACHER SAYS TO MEMORIZE THE CERTAIN CASE STUDIES DUE TO HER OWN EXAM, YOU HAVE TO DO IT.

THESE TIPS ARE ONLY FOR THE REAL IGCSE EXAM.
